Although net neutrality can be a great act because it doesn't hold limits for the users on specific sites and gets rid of monopolies. As for anti-net neutrality the company we receive our internet service from can charge us more for the speed and the company can decide whether or not to you can enter a certain site because they may already have linked with another corporation such as Verizon can link with Google and not let you visit yahoo.

Therefore my position after understanding what net neutrality can actually do for us as consumers. In America we obviously pay for our worth no matter the restrictions we should generally get what we pay for. If we want faster speed on our internet service and the companies are willing to charge a fee we the customers should actually have that option. Yes some companies will have the money to give us more speed and may charge double or triple than other companies but we should have the option. In my perspective I say that wheelers proposal for net neutrality shouldn't be passed, equality doesn't equal quality.
