

Dear FCC,

My name is Kaysean Lee and I live in Fresno, CA.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it users may have fewer options and a less diverse Internet.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because ISPs could act as the gatekeepers to their subscribers.

The Internet, is an important aspect to our everyday living. As an excessive user of the Internet, slowing down the Internet would only kindle anger and frustration in all of us. Normal everyday use has enough slow downs and Internet traffic already, that's all we need. We don't need any more regulators going around slowing down and limiting the things that we COULD do with the Internet. As a student, the Internet is an advantage, a privilege. Other places may have slower internet than some and this "new change" would only hinder the future of our society and possibly our place in the world. The Internet provides easy access to information at an instant. The world wide web is a place where I can reach out for information that I can't get anywhere else right then. It is more convenient when information is given to you quickly. The future is filled within the webpages of the Internet. The Internet is an arsenal of information, just waiting for some curious person to stumble upon it and achieve something whether or not it benefits them. If censoring and regulating the Internet is a must, then we might as well just turn into a Police State. The Internet is what connects people across the globe. If this comes to pass and these Internet Service Providers do get what they want, they could do anything. We are already paying too much for Internet service and they want more? This could very well likely bring upon an age where Internet Service Providers will lose out on customers. Comcast tries too hard to keep their customers and it is irksome. It kindles anger, it makes some feel pugnacious. Internet Service Providers need to quell themselves and stop being so childish. It's not about them anymore. They provide the Internet service and WE THE PEOPLE use their service to share OUR service to everyone else around the world. What kind of state is this where Service Providers think they are MORE than Service Providers. They should not be worrying about other services that exist because of the Internet. They are "Internet Service Providers" for a reason. They are Internet Service Providers because THEY provide US with the SERVICE to help us ACHIEVE greater heights and better innovation.

Sincerely,

Kaysean Lee
