Dear FCC,

My name is Joshua Stovall and I live in Columbus, OH.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it users may have fewer options and a less diverse Internet.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because ISPs could act as the gatekeepers to their subscribers.

The Internet is important to me because, as a college business student, I need to know that there will not be barriers to entry for the new ideas and services that I hope to bring to the marketplace. If ISP subscribers have an easier time loading websites of existing companies than my new innovative product, there's no way that I will be able to compete or even be able to support the economy of the internet because of our fixed budget. I would have to stop internet service all together. I am only 29 so I can teach my daughter to not be connected to the internet. Though I would miss it.

Sincerely,

Joshua Stovall
