Dear FCC,

My name is Zach Domitrowich and I live in Tempe, AZ.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it eventually money will dictate what information is shared over the net.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because big business will stifle innovation and lead to less competition.

I use the internet to communicate, earn my college degree and for entertainment. Every citizen should have an equal usable baseline up and download speeds on the internet without having to pay premiums for basic access. Service connection in the USA is already costlier than other countries for comparable speeds. Net neutrality prevents ISP's from hiding the true costs of their network.

Sincerely,

Zach Domitrowich
