Dear FCC,

My name is Sarah and I live in Ladson, SC.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

The internet is important to me because it is not only an outlet for my creative ideas, but a place for me to feel like I can do anything. I love the freedom that the internet provides, as well as the possibility of finding something new or learning about a topic I am interested in. It is not fair for the internet to be strangled and turned into a place where only a select few are able to access certain pages- the privileged. Please stop this from happening!

Sincerely,

Sarah
