Dear FCC,

My name is Lorca Jolene and I live in Chicago, IL.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it users may have fewer options and a less diverse Internet.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because ISPs could act as the gatekeepers to their subscribers.

Net neutrality is important to me because there are already far too many sources of education and avenues of entrepreneurship that are barred to individuals who cannot pay to access them in American society. The internet must remain a place where individuals can access information, potential customers, social media and news, and communities without being hindered by their low income or restricted by rich, white, heterosexual men determining what information, news, businesses, and entertainments is allowed to reach what populations.

Sincerely,

Lorca Jolene
