Dear FCC,

My name is Sarah and I live in Savannah , GA.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

The Internet is important to me because as an art student with a great interest in psychology, it is important for me to have unfiltered access to what others are willing to put out there. The Internet is amazing just the way because there is no limitation to the innovation that people have working their minds. I can look at pieces far different and more unique than what you would see in a museum or art gallery. The internet is perfect just the way it is!

Sincerely,

Sarah
