Dear FCC,

My name is Joshua Randall and I live in Fort Riley, KS.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

ISP providers have no right to limit what I choose to do on the internet and by providing preferential services only to those who can afford it. The American people will not stand for it.

Sincerely,

Joshua Randall
