Dear FCC,

My name is Sheena Keiser and I live in Auburn, WA.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because ISPs could act as the gatekeepers to their subscribers.

The Internet is important to me because as a teacher I need to know that there will not be barriers to entry for the new ideas and services that help me reach students. Think tanks and text book companies with money are not the only places that have great ideas for education. The ability for individuals to have a platform to share ideas or start up companies that encourages innovation is critical in education and small business.

Sincerely,

Sheena Keiser
