Dear FCC,

My name is Patrick Linsey and I live in Stamford, CT.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

The internet is awesome because it's democratic. What is proposed will make it less so. It will diminish what makes the internet great. The internet doesn't need to be more like big media. Really, the reverse should be true. But if the government is going to put its thumb on the scales, it shouldn't be doing so on the side of huge media companies.

Sincerely,

Patrick Linsey
