Dear FCC,

My name is Abir Vatsyayana and I live in Newtown, PA.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

The internet has become an integral part of our society. The FCC was created to protect and regulate the internet, among other communications. Today, we are asking you to help. We, the people of the United States, the users of the internet, the businesses large and small, are asking you to help. Protecting net neutrality is in everyone's best interest. It's crucial for a free and open internet. Letting ISPs control the internet is not what will help the internet. We are trusting the FCC to protect the internet.

Sincerely,

Abir Vatsyayana
