

7522826157.txt

I shouldn't have to even comment, given the extremely obvious attempt by the ISP's to purchase their way, on the need to maintain a completely neutral and level field in access to the internet. This is sociopathic greed in its worst form. That the FCC would even consider this move by the internet providers is unconscionable. It's wrong, at its most basic level. Instead of selling out, how about looking after the public?