The Net neutrality proposal should not be passed. It is simplify a codification of the monopolist tendencies of the few ISPs that remain. The proposal only serves to provide more money to these large corporate ISPs while at the same time costing consumers money and giving an unfair competitive edge to larger vendors on the internet - at the expense of smaller organizations and start-ups. This monopolist proposal is un-American at best, as it is designed to destroy fair market competition.

It's disgusting that it's even gotten this far.

What is more disgusting is that no one is going to even read this. Because what the people want does not matter anymore. It's just what these rich corporations want. You should be ashamed of yourselves.
