

7522903132.txt

I can think of no better way to destroy innovation, censor information, and entrench poverty than by denying net neutrality. Creating an Internet where information is only available for the monied will create further class rifts and limit opportunities for economic advancement.

If economics are the concern, then a population which lacks full access to the internet will be far more costly than one with unrestricted access.

I urge you to maintain & promote net neutrality.