

7522907432.txt

The internet must remain a free and open market and must be protected from individuals and companies that would aim to control flow of information and access for those unable to pay additional fees that inhibit the ability to compete online. To have free access to distribute ideas is a beautiful thing, and it should not be limited or pimped out to the highest bidder by immoral greedy companies.